

Venue: La Corrala. Museum of Arts and Popular Traditions

The UAM Museum of Arts and Popular Traditions was created by an agreement of the governing board of UAM on 22 May 1973, when it was agreed to accept the donation of the ethnological collections of Guadalupe González-Hontoria y Allendesalazar as the initial base of the museum, this lady then being appointed as the director and lecturer of Arts and Popular Traditions. The museum's holdings have increased over the years, and it now holds more than 7,000 pieces acquired in fieldwork by the director, Museum staff, students and interns.

The museum's pieces are displayed in five galleries, by subject matter:

- Room I: The human life cycle and popular religion;
- Room II: Annual festive cycle, musical instruments and adults' games;
- Room III: Domestic tasks.
- Room IV: Techniques for obtaining and producing food;
- Room V: Crafts and rural transport.
